Charlotte's Cave

Charlotte's Cave was discovered in 1893 by three carpenters from Hürben. It was named after Queen Charlotte of Württemberg.

With 587 metres (1925 ft.), Charlotte's Cave is one of the longest caves in southern Germany. Fascinating dripstone formations and a state of the art light installation are waiting for you.

Young and old visitors can discover this exiting place that countless bats call their home. You will also find traces that prove that cave bears once lived here.

Interactive Museum HöhlenSchauLand

Here people of all ages can learn about the earth's history in an exceedingly vivid way.

Modern exhibition technology and amazing presentations provide an entertaining and interesting way of learning. Get immersed into the world of the Jurassic Sea, work ivory with a flint blade and become an archaeological researcher.

Personal explorations and discoveries are explicitly welcome.

Service Center HöhlenHaus

The service center is located in a replica of a longhouse from the neolithic period and informs visitors about the origin, the discovery and the opening of the cave to the public. You can also learn about the „Geopark Schwäbische Alb“.

Adventure playgrounds for kids, local food by the in-house gastronomy and beautiful picnic areas complete your day out.

Embedded in an idyllic natural landscape, a fully equipped motorhome area lies only a short distance away from the complex.

Also within close proximity the „Jakobswege“ is located. This 2,5 kilometre (1,55 mi) long nature trail is a miniature version of the famous Camino de Santiago / Way of St. James.
